COMMON QUESTIONS ABOUT THE USE OF THIS FORM

What does the Transfer on Death (TOD) deed do? A TOD deed allows property to pass directly to the person you name as beneficiary upon your death. This means the property does not go through probate. However, the property is still subject to any mortgages, liens, or other claims that exist at that time. The deed does nothing while you are alive — you remain the owner and can sell, mortgage, or make otherwise permissible changes to the property at any time. If you no longer own the property at the time of your death, the TOD deed has no effect.

Which controls at my death, my will or the TOD deed? If you have both a will and a TOD Deed, the TOD deed takes precedence. Even if your will gives different instructions, this deed determines who receives the described property upon your death.

How do I make a TOD deed? You must complete this form in full, sign it, and have it properly notarized. The deed must then be recorded with the Recorder of Deeds in each county where the property is located. The deed has no effect unless it is signed, notarized, and recorded prior to your death. (Example: If live in lower Smyrna and part of your property is in New Castle County and Kent County you will need to file this in both counties)

Is the “legal description” of the property necessary? Yes. The Recorder of Deeds cannot accept the form without a complete legal description.

How do I find the “legal description” of the property? The legal description is usually on the deed you received when you acquired the property. If you have misplaced your deed or did not receive a copy, you may obtain one from the Recorder of Deeds office in the county where the property is located. Copies are typically available online for a fee, or you may visit the Recorder of Deeds office in person to request a copy.

Can I change my mind before I record the TOD deed? Yes. If the deed has not been recorded, you may destroy it. Once the deed has been recorded, additional steps are required to revoke it. A Revocation of TOD Deed must be completed, notarized, and recorded with the Recorder of Deeds in the county where the property is located.

How do I “record” the TOD deed? Submit the completed, signed and notarized form to the Recorder of Deeds office in the county where the property is located. If the property spans more than one county, the deed must be recorded in each county. When this document is recorded, it becomes part of the official land records for your property.

Can I later revoke the TOD deed if I change my mind? Yes. The property owner may revoke the deed at any time during their lifetime. Beneficiaries have no authority to prevent revocation.

How do I revoke the TOD deed after it is recorded? A: There are three methods:

1. Complete, notarize, and record a revocation form.
2. Complete, notarize, and record a new TOD deed for the same property.
3. Transfer the property during your lifetime through a new recorded deed that expressly revokes the TOD deed.

Can I revoke a TOD deed through my will? No. A will does not override or revoke a TOD deed.

I am being pressured to complete this form. What should I do? This form should only be completed voluntarily. Do not complete or sign this form under pressure or undue influence. If you feel pressured, you may wish to speak with a trusted family member or friend. For guidance on your rights, you should consult an attorney.

Do I need to tell the beneficiaries about the TOD deed? No. There is no legal requirement to notify beneficiaries. However, some owners choose to share this information to avoid confusion or disputes in the future. Notifying beneficiaries can help ensure that they are aware of your intentions, but the decision is entirely up to you.

I have other questions about this form. What should I do? This form is not designed to fit everyone’s needs in every situation. The Recorder of Deeds cannot provide legal advice. Because estate planning needs vary, it is highly recommended that you consult an attorney to determine how this form may affect your overall estate plan.
